Why does any of this technical stuff matter?

I have costs associated with making printables and offering them free for download. I have a choice on how to recoup the costs – ads or charging for printables. At this point, I've chosen ads. If my files are hosted incorrectly, my ads are not being seen and I have no way to recoup my costs. If I cannot pay for the website, I cannot offer free files. I own copyright of my works as these are my intellectual property. These files may not be shared under fair use. In the US, one factor to consider in a fair use analysis is this: the effect of the use upon the potential market for or value of the copyrighted work. If my files are distributed any place other than my website, it hurts the potential market of the work because I can earn money from the ad revenue on my blog.
