Ruby Bridges

How do you get to school? Do you ride a bus, or do your parents drive you? Some children have school at home. They just walk down the hall!

In 1960, a first grader named Ruby Bridges rode a special car to school. It was driven by federal marshals. These government workers worked to keep Ruby safe.

Going to school was dangerous for Ruby. Angry crowds yelled hateful things as Ruby got out of the marshals' car. She was the first African American child to attend William Frantz Elementary, and many people didn't want the school to integrate. They wanted to scare Ruby and her family so that she would stop going to William Frantz. But the marshals and police officers protected Ruby from the mob.

Most white families boycotted the school. They refused to send their children to William Frantz because they didn't think that African American and white children should attend the same school.

Only one teacher agreed to teach Ruby. Mrs. Henry was a thoughtful, caring teacher, and Ruby enjoyed being her student.

Ruby's family suffered because of their decision to send Ruby to William Frantz. Her father was fired from his job. They weren't allowed to shop at their grocery store. People threatened them.

But other Americans were kind. They sent money and gifts to Ruby's family.

Ruby Bridges helped bring an important change to America. Now children of all races go to school together.

Ruby's school was in New Orleans, Louisiana.
